

Conflicts of interest

RBF's commitment

RBF takes the management of conflicts of interest or duty very seriously. Not only because the standards set by regulations are high, but also as it is an important matter for the Tasmanian community to consider and for the Superannuation Commission (Commission) to appropriately deal with openly and transparently.

What does RBF's Conflict Management Policy cover?

RBF's Conflict Management Policy applies to the Commissioner of the Commission (the trustee of RBF) and covers the identification, disclosure, recording, management and avoidance of conflicts. Conflicts may arise from other interests held, or from duties owed to other entities and may be actual or potential.

Staff of the Office of the Superannuation Commission are required to comply with the Department of Treasury and Finance's Conflict of Interest Framework, which obliges disclosure of actual and potential conflicts of interest and duty.

Commission's Register of relevant interest

RBF promotes the value of proactive disclosure of conflicts. At each Commission meeting, the Commissioner discloses any interests or duties owed to other entities.

Potential conflicts are to be disclosed to the Secretary of the Department of Treasury and Finance and, once disclosed, managed or avoided in accordance with the requirements in the Public Sector Superannuation Reform Act 2016. For the purposes of disclosure of interests by a Commissioner, an interest means "a direct or indirect interest (pecuniary or otherwise) in a matter that is about to be considered by a Commissioner in his or her capacity as a Commissioner, and includes any matter which a Commissioner considers might give rise to an interest."

The Commission's Register of relevant interests and duties is as follows:

Name	Evelyn Horton
Duties relating to Fund	Superannuation Commissioner
Principal employer	Various board memberships
Company Directorships	Chair, Glebe Administration Board Director, Anglican Community Services Director, Australian Reinsurance Pool Corporation (3 year term from 23 April 2023)
Other positions or interests	Nil
Conflict management	No conflicts
